VARIAN FRY

THE PATHS OF EXILE

On August 14, 1940, Varian Mackey Fry, a young American journalist sent by the Emergency Rescue Committee, arrived in Marseille with 3,000 dollars, a list of 200 people to save, and a letter of recommendation from Eleanor Roosevelt.

His mission: to help anti-Nazi artists and intellectuals escape the fascist threat.

Originally planned for three weeks, his mission lasted thirteen months. Thanks to his efforts, over 1,800 people, including some of the greatest artists and thinkers of the 20th century, were rescued.

The exhibition highlights the extraordinary figure of a man who, in 1994, became the first American to be awarded the title of "Righteous Among the Nations."

THE 100 DAYS of the Battle OF NORMANDY

The images projected on nine screens are sourced from British, Canadian, German, American and French archival footage.

On both sides of the Channel, one was preparing for this long-awaited moment. Then, in spite of unfavorable weather conditions, came the morning of June 6, 1944, the first step towards the liberation of Western Europe. From the landings on the 5 beaches of the Manche and Calvados departments to the tragic bombing of Le Havre on September 12, the Battle of Normandy lasted 100 days. Experience 20 minutes of pure historical intensity!

To improve the visitor experience, our reception area has been fully redesigned: maps, the chronology and the outcome of the Battle of Normandy are on view as well as several British military artifacts from the Caen Mémorial collection are also on display.
